COVID-19: A SILENT PANDEMIC

Problematizing to implement preventive and treatment solutions

In December 2019, the first reports of acute respiratory syndrome cases appeared in the Chinese municipality of Wuhan, prompting authorities to classify it as a new coronavirus that had not been associated with humans before. As the disease outbreak has spread rapidly through China, without the exact source being detected, it has spread to a variety of nations in the Asia, Europe, Australia, Africa and North America regions, with a expected extension to the entire planet.

The new strain of coronavirus and the disease caused by it received an official name on February 12, 2020, becoming the second strain of SARS and labeled as severe acute respiratory syndrome coronavirus 2 (SARS-CoV-2), and the disease it was named COVID -19. This new strain of coronavirus, with confirmed person-to-person transmission, has become a primary concern for public health, as there is minimal knowledge about its mechanisms of action, its criticality, and possible treatment solutions.
